Your assignment begins with the cartoon “Electronic Tigers” and the article “Breastfeeding Kills”, both of which are available under the “readings” section of the course website (http://myweb.facstaff.wwu.edu/~wasserr/112/readings.html). Each of these pieces suggests an argument about abortion; your assignment is to present, explain, and evaluate one of those arguments.

In presenting the argument, you should try to write out the argument in premise-conclusion format. Here are a few tips:

- In both cases, it is probably best to identify the conclusion first and then go back to identify the premises.
- Both arguments can be formulated as arguments by analogy, which we will discuss in class (there are other ways of formulating the arguments as well).
- The author of “Breastfeeding Kills” is obviously being facetious; you should present his real argument, which is an argument against the relevant proposal.

In explaining the argument, you should explain the reasoning behind the argument. This will require you to go line-by-line and say something in support of each step.

In evaluating the argument, you should raise a potential objection. This will require you to criticize the form of the argument or to question one of the premises.

Your assignment should be typed and less than one page in length.

Your assignment is due at the beginning of class on Friday, November 6th.
